

OUR STORY

Dalton School

Kingsley, founder of UCESCO Africa, met Father Paul, a local priest committed to helping the most vulnerable. Together, they made a promise: to build a real school for the children of Loosuk. Today, that promise is called Dalton School — a school still under construction, but already filled with life, dreams, and resilience.

The story behind Dalton School

Until just one year ago, the children of Loosuk, a remote village in northern Kenya, studied standing under a tree. They had to walk 30 km per day to reach the school in a very dangerous places, walking in the dark and in the area of wild elephants.

Two years ago

When it rained, they had no choice but to return home. No desks. No books. No walls. Just the will to learn. Everything started with a powerful encounter

Their homes are made of dry reeds

The Reality on the Ground:

- 🚫 No access to electricity or clean water
- 🏠 Families sleep on animal skins laid directly on bare earth
- 👩‍🚰 Women walk for an entire day just to fetch water through very dangerous areas
- 🍽️ For many children, school is the only place they get a meal
